made it too late for "Joel and 1," or bless us throughout the year, in one ever-"Easterly," or even "Joe," to make her changing, never ending panorama of world renowned. Has it occured to Joe perfect beauty. that possibly he or she over-drew" his or her pun?

The every-where-present fever and chills have sought us out, and settled Heaven than earth, and lift our thoughts down uncomfortably in our midst. The above. As we gaze with rapture, upou question is, how did they get here? no those ever-varying forms and tints, which steam-cars, no horse cars, no telegraph. no earth artist could copy, we almost wires, no steam yachts, no telephone, no fancy we can see the domes of the "Ceanything. Our gorgeous Autumn leaves lestial City," the "Gates of Pearl," the have had their gaiety snaken out of them by the late chills, and, now, are lying But enough—no pen of ours can ever curled up on the ground, with no hope give the faintest outline of those perfect of ever getting warm. Winter is coming pictures, which the Heavenly Artist on as steadily as his frozen feet will paluts again and again for us. permit. Soon we shall be snow-bound. The jovial clam peddler will cease to perform so artistically on his doubtful musical-instrument-the "mest-man" -what an unnecessery adjective, -will muffle his dinner announcing-bell, and our empty table will exclaim pathetically, Alas! that beef should be so dear And sausage be so cheap ; It augure ill for dogs and cats, And makes one's flesh to creep.

No gentler sound then the flerce rush of the blast will satisfy our love of music. Perhaps Joe will be glad that we are soon to be so shut up, and that all things earthly are to fail us, -- except, we hope, our BEE, whose columns so long as Joe continues to wield his pleasant-tempered pen, will be of untold in-EASTERLY. terest to

They are around us on every side. Beautiful indeed to-night, in the soft their agony in silence, thinking there pink haze, which the setting sun has thrown over them. It seems as if we cure. Notwithstanding the total failure were a little hill set in the midst, for we of the many remedies heretofore offered can look in no direction without seeing them, and close at hand, is our own them, and close at hand, is our own had tried the various remedies but in "Silver Lake," glinting, and gleaming at us through the trees of our own beauti-

We have never had any ambition to search for the North Pole, or the South. We are content to swing between-(in S. Dunning the immmock, we mean.) But we were called out the other evening to see Mars' Moons, and answering the call, we found some of the youngsters with a looking glass, acting upon the suggestion of the Bridgeport Standard. They found them too, (or something which looked like them,) and one "irrepressible" declared he could see the inhabitants of Venus picking up their heels in some sort of a dance. Probably it was the last "Hop" of the season. We didn't know the looking glass was so good a telescope before.

Our Summer flowers have left us. No purple asters, or golden rod, or scarlet sumac, though beautiful in themselves, DISTRICT OF NEWTOWN S. Probats Cour can atone for thier loss. We miss them sadly, especially the "Lily" fair, whose fragrant memories linger still, and so recall departed joys, that we cannot help letting, "Sorrowing thoughts of the past arlse, and tears of anguish be-dim our eyes, as the weeks glide by."

But in our judgment, the greatest charm of our home on the "Hill," is our glorious sun-set views, thrown upon a glorious sun-set views, thrown upon a characteristic of the purpose of attending on the business of said and the purpose of attendin glorious sun-set views, thrown appears the purpose of appearance of the canvass stretching as far as the eye can appearance of appearance of the purpose of appea
